Wesley Noreen Westrum

Officially named manager last Nov. 18, after serving as interim manager since July 25 following Casey Stengel's hip fracture . . . Mets won 19 and lost 48 under his command as he unselfishly made player development program No. 1 project. Results were underscored by emergence of Tug McGraw, Dick Selma and Darrell Sutherland as nucleus of prized young pitching staff.

Started season in dugout with Stengel and named pitching coach when Warren Spahn was released at All-Star break . . . Joined Mets' staff after 1963 season and handled first base coaching duties in 1964 . . . Coached with San Francisco (1958-63) after spending entire major league playing career (1947-1957) with New York Giants.

Set NL record for catchers with .999 fielding average (one error) in 1950. Had best year at plate in 1950 with 23 homers, and hit 20 more following year. Had three homers in one game, June 24, 1950.

Broke into organized ball in 1940 with Crookston (Minn.) of Northern League . . . Also played with Eau Claire, Little Rock and Minneapolis before entering service in May, 1943. After discharge he went to Jacksonville in 1946 and Minneapolis in 1947. After 1947 playoffs he joined Giants for six games and played entire 1948 season with New York. Farmed to Jersey City at start of 1949 but recalled after 51 games and has since been in majors as player, coach and manager.

Played on "Miracle of Coogan's Bluff" pennant winners of 1951 and '54 Giants' world champions who swept World Series from Cleveland . . . Member of 1952 and '53 All-Star squads although he didn't play in either game.

Bought first tuxedo he ever owned past winter to meet demands of "black tie" banquet circuit . . . He and wife, Josephine, have two daughters, Barbara and Joann.

BORN: Nov. 28, 1922, Clearbrook, Minn. HT: 5-11; WT: 200; RESIDENCE: Phoenix, Ariz. Former catcher.
